1. Prevention Procedures

The following written instructions detailing violence prevention procedures are to be provided to all employees at each work site:

Workplace Violence Prevention Handout

PERSONAL SAFETY CONSIDERATIONS

Dealing with hostile or angry individuals causes all of us concern. The behavior of hostile and angry people can be unpredictable. While each situation is different, the following principles will assist in resolving such encounters with a non-violent conclusion.

Model control, do not demand it

Project a calm, professional demeanor. By keeping your emotions in check, you increase your instances of decreasing anger and emotional turmoil in others. This leads to an increased ability in the other person to respond to logic rather than emotion. If you lose your temper the chances of the incident ending in violence are almost certain.

Assess as you approach

Approach openly and with confidence. Tell a crowd to disperse. When possible, assign tasks to bystanders. "Go to the office. Ask for a teacher to come here." Use simple language. Express simple thoughts. Do not use jargon (edu-speak).

Watch the periphery of the area

Watch for weapons and for other problem individuals. Weapons will often be passed to individuals standing away from the centre of the action.

Work in pairs whenever possible

Person #1 makes contact and gives direction. Person #2 monitors the incident while standing approximately 3 metres from Person #1.

Ensure you have a clear exit

Before entering an area, be sure you can leave easily. Protect your access to an exit. Use it if access is going to be locked. Stand at a right angle to the person rather than directly in front of them.

Keep your hands free

Avoid carrying anything in your hands. It is difficult to appear in control when your hands are not free. Do not put your hands on your hips, point your finger or wave your arms.

Identify yourself by name and/or title

Do not assume that this will bring about immediate compliance. It will decrease the likelihood of a challenge to your authority (“So who do you think you are?”).

Listen, listen, listen

If an angry individual is willing to talk, let them. Do not interrupt. Talking is an easy and face-saving way for an angry individual to calm down. Use silence to advantage.

Let them “save face”

Everyone appreciates a way out. Think of providing choices as you listen. Be reassuring. Repeat back to confirm what you have heard. Break a problem into smaller pieces and offer step by step solutions. Be honest and do not offer what you cannot deliver. Do not tell the person to calm down. Do not criticize.

Maintain eye contact

Remember that a person can move several metres in less than a second. Do not stare but keep the person (s) in sight at all times.

When possible, keep a barrier between you and the individual

Barriers decrease the chances of assault and increase the time needed to escape.

Allow a clear exit for the aggressor

If the aggressor chooses to leave, allow them to go. Make sure they have a way out. Do not fight. Walk, or run, away if necessary.

If approaching a vehicle

Note the license plate details and description of the vehicle. Do not approach the vehicle from the front or rear. Stay out of the door-swing arc. Do not lean onto or into the vehicle.

2. Worker and Supervisor Training

Any employee at risk and their supervisor must be given information about the risk. All employees who may come in contact with a potentially violent individual shall be given the person's identity. If the person is a learner, the employee shall be given the current Learner Safety Plan related to dealing with that specific learner. Confidential materials will be shared on a need-to-know basis. Employees must also be given training in the correct response procedures.

The training must ensure that violence prevention procedures and work environment arrangements are understood and followed. The training and procedures will vary from site to site and with different situations.

Notes on the training must be maintained at the site to provide a written record of the training. The notes should detail who the trainer was, who attended and what was covered.

3. Responding to Incidents Involving Employees

- 3.1. When an employee believes there is a risk due to an act or threat of violence, the employee shall:
